PLAZA COP IS KIDDIES' PAL

Harry Cherry Was First Traffic Officer; Now Guards San Jacinto

By T. B. WHEELER.

"Well, and how's the little boys and girls this evening?" And did you know your lessons in school today, like I told you you must?"

There's a kindly, gentle voiced cop who meets a score or more of El Paso's "future greats" in San Jacinto plaza each day with a salutation similar to the above. He is officer Harry Cherry, one of the oldest policemen in point of service, on the El Paso staff. He was the city's first traffic officer, and today is filled with the love of days when autos were so novel in the city that crowds gathered where one stopped.

Officer Cherry could well be named Merry, Cherry or anything else which means happiness and the spreading of joy, for in recent years he has come to believe that part of his duty consists in making others feel the joy of living that is his.

Suffer Little Children—

"When you meet a man who's friendly with the kiddies, tie to him," is a rather modern day saying that might be applied in this case. It's officer Harry Cherry's boast that he knows all the women and children ever born in El Paso. He means, of course, those who are living here now.

"When I used to stand at the old transfer station down there between the high building and the hotel," said officer Cherry, when a Herald man dug him from amidst the children, "why the horses and buggies had to pass there and we thought we thought there was an awful amount of traffic then. I was the only traffic cop and I didn't have any of those fancy sort of signs to turn. I just relied my club and the drivers brought their horses to a walk."

Four Mile Limit.

"Then came the automobiles. They were a source of worry, but we put four miles an hour as their limit past the transfer station and controlled them. Lots o' 'em said they couldn't go that slow, but when we arrested a few of them the others found that they could."

Officer Cherry meets the kiddies every day when they come from school. His beat comprises only San Jacinto plaza. He keeps children from falling into the enclosure where the alligators are confined; finds lost babies for anxious mothers; wakes up gently but firmly the poor devils who lodge on the park benches; and "jolies" the men who ask him a multitude of questions each day.

Kiddies Come First.

Ask him, though, what he likes best about El Paso, and he'll tell you the kiddies come first. Then the climate. Recently he returned to his old home in east Texas for a visit. His son and daughter both live there. Both are grown up and did not recognize him. It was his first trip back in 20 years.

He's back on the job now, meeting the children each day with as happy a smile as he wore before he left. He declares he will be an El Paso policeman for 25 years longer.

RICH PIONEER'S SECOND WIFE IS AWARDED HIS ESTATE

San Francisco, Calif., Oct. 12.—Mrs. Luella R. Hughes of Modesto, Calif., was declared by the state supreme court Wednesday to be the lawful widow of the late Hiram Hughes and as such entitled to his estate of more than $500,000. Mrs. Hughes's right to his estate was contested by Mrs. Bingham of San Diego, who married Hughes in Norwich, N. Y., in 1850.

Hughes sailed away for California a year later and after the lapse of another year Mrs. Hughes learned that her husband had met death in a shipwreck. She married in 1854. In 1852 her second husband, E. J. Manning, died. In 1875, Mrs. Manning became the wife of Frank Bingham of New York state. Twenty seven years ago the family moved to San Diego and in 1914 they learned that Hughes had not met his death, but had married Miss Luella R. Auer in Stockton in 1854, reared a family of ten children and died leaving a large estate. The Bingham's agreed to have their marriage annulled, which was done in 1915, and Mrs. Bingham brought action to establish her claim to Hughes's fortune.

ESCAPED CONVICT FROM TEXAS CAUGHT ON COAST

San Francisco, Calif., Oct. 12.—The police assert that a man giving the name of Allan M. Dale, arrested with a young woman, companion on a charge of passing worthless checks in San Francisco and other coast cities, has confessed he had escaped from the penitentiary at Huntsville, Tex. He is said to have asserted that his real name is Dean H. Delmas, and that his uncle is the well known criminal attorney Delphin M. Delmas and that his father is Robert M. Delmas, a Chicago business man.

His escape, according to his alleged story, was on March 31, 1915, from the Texas prison, where he was serving a five year term for complicity in the wrecking of the International Bank and Trust company of San Angelo in 1914. He said he was cashier of the bank at the time of its failure, the police said.

TO PRESERVE HOUSE
WHERE GRANT MARRIED

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 12.—The old house in which Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, then a lieutenant, was married to Miss Julia Dent, is not to be torn down to make room for a more pretentious building.

The building, now a two-story and a half boarding house, was the Dent home. A few years ago the state historical society caused to be placed on it a placard, which stated simply the fact that the president-to-be had been married there. Alongside of it now is a dinky sign:

"Parloured Rooms with Board. Meals 20 Cents."

When the building was condemned and the material announced for sale, a movement to preserve the relic of Gen. Grant's younger days was started and money now is being raised to purchase the property, repair it and preserve it as worthy of a place in American history.

EIGHT DRIVERS WANTED

The drivers of the cars, it is said, have made a practice of driving around San Jacinto plaza and picking up passengers where traffic is more congested, and have kept their cars in line with the city ordinance. The arrests were made by the numbers of the different cars taken by motorcycle officers Wednesday night, who obtained evidence in each case.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 12.—Rear admiral Gleaves, commanding the Atlantic destroyer flotilla, reported today his personal belief that no steamer Kingston or Kingstonian was sunk by the German submarine during its operations off Nantuxet lightship.

After several days of search the destroyer forces have found no evidence that as ship of that name was in the vicinity and if admiral Gleaves's theory is correct only five ships were sunk. The admiral believes the "Kingston" was understood to be the "Kingston."
